Ushers and vendors were out in full force. At times it appeared there were more people working than there were spectators.

But Sportservice, Inc., concession holder at the stadium, wanted a trial run to make sure everything was ready for today. It was.

complete.

Telephones, cigarette machines and restrooms were plentiful and all in working order. Brats and metts turned on grills in concession stands that had only ushers for customers. Soap, toilet paper and towel dispensers were full in all restrooms. And, for the first time, season ticket holders were able to take advantage of the new liquor bar on the field level.

There was, however, a little grumbling Sunday, Reporters complained of unfinished floors in the press. hox. Some fans complained about the cold, but few blamed it on stadium officials. One couple complained after being turned away from the gate. They had tickets for the opener and were upset to discover they had showed up on the wrong day.

Some parts of the stadium are still not completed, primarily the Stadium Club area behind centerfield. Some finishing touches, such as trees in planters on the plaza, have not been taken care of.

BUT THE FANS today will be taken care of according to Max Jacobs, president of Sportservice. He said there will be more than 1000 vendors at the game, more than at the World Series last year and three times more than even worked at Crosley Field.

He said Sportservice expects to sell more than 35,000 hot dogs and 75,000 drinks during today's game.

As is has been for the previous S6 National Leage opening days, the occasion should be festive. Four bands will take part in the ceremonies. He Wagner's Ditiel Land Band, the Koper Bast Hand Sar Fore Base Band and the Queen City Drum and Bugle Corps.

For the 51st consecutive year the findlay Street Market Association will participate, conducting the flag ceremonies.

The first ball was to have been thrown out by Governor Gilligan, but he stepped aside in favor of Gordon Roberts of Lebanon, winner of the Medal of Honor.

Pope Warns Youth Of Protest Faddism

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI said in a Palm Sunday sermon that youthful protest is a fashionable phenomenon that can lead to mediocrity, false heroics and wasteful daydreaming.

He counselled young people not to become mere zeros — with their heads "in a bag" — or "mediocre numbers . . , satisfied with substitutes, with ghosts, with false heroisms."

Robed in red, the 73-year-old pontiff celebrated Mass in St. Peters's Basilica before 20 cardinals and thousands of Romans and Easter tourists.

In the ceremony which celebrates Christ's entry into Jerusalem, the Pope blessed the palms and distributed them to the cardinals and to many of the youths.

Then in his homily he addressed himself mainly to youths who he said showed varying behavior as Christians.

THERE IS A first category of Christians," he said, "that frequently and without even thinking choose the "zero" behavior. We call that behavior zero which does not give any weight, any importance to the fact of being Christian."

The Pope said this was frequently true in the developed Roman Catholic communities but in geontradiction because his way of thinking contradicts with his way of living."

Pope Paul said, however, that a real Christian "is not a zero man, indifferent, insignificant, un o on-scious, with his head in a bag. Still a d dressing bimself to youths, the Pope said:

"There is a second category which the Gospel calls reed men," men of reed who bow before any wind that blows, men lacking a
